1. Introduction

The NSW Department of Education's Disability Inclusion Action Plan 2016 – 2020 demonstrates the department's continuing commitment to improving the lives of people with disability, their families and carers. As we increasingly move toward models of service and practices which seek to remove obstacles and enable people to achieve their full potential, the department must ensure its operations and the services it provides are accessible and designed to enable and maximise participation of people with disability.

This Plan identifies actions the department will undertake over the next four years to foster an inclusive environment for people with disability, through policies, practices and high quality services that reflect, recognise and respond to their diverse needs.

The actions identified in this Plan respond to State and Federal legislation and policy initiatives that support rights of people with disability. Primary among these is the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 which protects the rights of people with disability. The introduction in 2005 of the Disability Standards for Education (the Disability Standards) contributed to an increasing focus in our schools on improving the educational outcomes of students with disability. In particular, the Disability Standards require schools, among other education providers, to provide reasonable adjustments that enable students with disability to access and participate in education on the same basis as their peers. The department is currently committed to working with the Commonwealth to implement the recommendations of a review of the operation of the Disability Standards completed in 2015.

In 2008, Australia's ratification of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities (UNCRPD) signified a commitment by all levels of government to eradicate obstacles faced by people with disability. This was followed in 2010 by the National Disability Strategy, which set out a 10 year national plan for implementing the obligations under the UNCRPD and improving life for Australians with disability, their families and carers.

In 2013, the Federal Government, together with the states, agreed to the introduction of a National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS). The NDIS will provide lifetime support to people with significant disability and give them choice and control over their access to specialist support services. The NDIS does not change the obligations of schools and the early childhood education and care sector towards people with disability. Transition to the NDIS in NSW commenced in 2016, with the NDIS to be fully in place in NSW by July 2018. The department is working with State and national agencies, staff and stakeholders to support this transition.

In 2014, the NSW Parliament passed the Disability Inclusion Act (the Act), demonstrating the NSW Government's ongoing commitment to building an inclusive community. The Act provides the legislative framework for the development and implementation of a NSW Disability Inclusion Action Plan (the State Plan) to drive disability access and inclusion. The State Plan is based around four key focus areas, formulated in consultation with disability stakeholders and the Disability Council NSW:

1. developing positive community attitudes and behaviours towards people with disability
2. creating more liveable communities for people with disability
3. achieving a higher rate of meaningful employment participation by people with disability through inclusive employment practices
4. achieving more equitable access to mainstream services for people with disability through better systems and processes

The State Plan underpins the direction, focus and content of this Plan.

2. The NSW Department of Education

The NSW Department of Education is one of the largest organisations in Australia and employs in excess of 84,000 staff. The department's vision is for a highly skilled, vibrant and inclusive NSW where all students are achieving their potential and contributing as informed citizens to our society, where all staff are valued for their skills and contributions and where Aboriginal people are determining their own futures.

The Department of Education funds and delivers education services for NSW students from preschool to secondary school. The department also regulates the early childhood education and care sector including preschools, long day care centres and family day care and supports their inclusion of children with disability. Through Aboriginal Affairs, the department works with Aboriginal communities to promote social, economic and cultural wellbeing.

The department manages one of the most extensive public education systems in the world. It delivers education to more than 780,000 school students each year through its network of over 2,200 public schools, representing around two-thirds of all school students in NSW. In addition, the department provides funding support to over 400,000 students attending non-government schools.

Overall, the Department of Education is committed to improving the lives of people with disability, their families and carers through ongoing engagement, consultation and advocacy. The department provides leadership for supporting positive community understanding, attitudes and behaviours and embraces the diverse experiences of persons with disability.

Ongoing engagement with people with disability and their families and carers is an essential component of this Plan.

This Plan builds on the significant initiatives implemented by the department under its previous Disability Action Plan 2011-2015. Some of these achievements included:

- implementing Every Student, Every School, an ongoing initiative that continues to strengthen support for students whose learning is impacted by disability through a range of activities including increased professional learning for teachers
- implementing the department's Access Review Tool to identify and prioritise projects in schools to meet the access needs of students and staff with disability
- continuing to be a major sponsor of the NSW Don't DIS my ABILITY campaign
- establishing the Disability Employee network, providing a forum for consultation and feedback on organisational strategies and policies that may affect employees with disability.

3. Legislative and policy context

The Department of Education operates within a context of a wide range of legal and policy obligations and these have informed the development of this Plan. The obligations include:

4. Key areas for action

The department's Disability Inclusion Action Plan 2016-2020 incorporates outcomes and actions that align with the State Plan and support the implementation of important national and state priorities and initiatives. This includes:

- Supporting the successful transition of people with disability to the National Disability Insurance Scheme in NSW by July 2018 and its intersection with services provided by the department.
- Improving service delivery to students with disability in public schools in response to the recommendations of the NSW Audit

Office in its Performance Audit entitled Supporting Students with Disability in NSW Public Schools.<sup>1</sup>

- Fostering an inclusive workplace in which employees with disability are supported to succeed
- Focusing on the development of accessible and clear communications to help inform the community and shape community attitudes
- A commitment to increasing the number of children with disability accessing a quality preschool education program in the year before full-time school, and supporting inclusive practices in the early childhood education and care sector.

5. Consultation

The department's Disability Employee Network has contributed to the development of this plan and plays an important role in advising, supporting and monitoring its implementation.

The department has also utilised feedback from a wide range of parent, community and education stakeholders about its services in the development of this Plan.

A consultation draft of this Plan was provided directly to a range of external peak and representative groups for feedback, including the following:

- Disability Council NSW
- Federation of Parents and Citizens Associations of NSW
- People with Disabilities Australia
- Children and Young People with Disability Australia

<sup>1</sup> The Plan includes actions that are directly in response to recommendations from the Performance Audit.

- NSW Primary Principals Association
- NSW Secondary Principals Association
- National Disability Services
- Family Advocacy

Feedback on the consultation draft was also received from non-government disability organisations, the early childhood education and care sector and individuals with disability, their representatives and advocates.

Ongoing engagement and feedback with a wide range of groups and individuals with an interest in matters impacting people with disability, in addition to any emerging priorities and issues impacting people with disability who access department services, will continue to inform adjustments to the Plan as required.
